There's been a lot of talk about the so called "Rae Days" and what they might mean to the students of Laurentian. Rumor has it that the faculty will be canceling their classes during the first scheduled week after Christmas, (January 3-9) effectively giving students an extra week of holidays even though the university will be open for business.

In the beginning, there was the social contract brought to you by the Ontario government. In an effort to cut public service spending, public employees (including university faculty) would be given a few unpaid days off. These days, the "Rae Days" in question, can be taken at the discretion of the employee. It is important to remember this fact: the faculty are legally bound to take these days off and are legally entitled to take them whenever they choose.

In response, and probably protest, The Laurentian University Faculty Association (LUFA) passed a motion saying that faculty would take the first week after Christmas off. That week equals the four unpaid days off they must take.

"Rae Days" and Holidays

Enter the university. The Senate came down on the decision of LUFA by saying that anyone who took part in this "protest" would be in violation of their collective agreement. (The collective agreement says that every faculty member must put in x number of "teaching days" and those requirements would not be filled by taking this action.) Further, the university vowed to take action against professors who took part.

The argument can go either way. Delaying the semester by a week means that students have one week less to get academic counseling, to drop or add courses and to have the prescribed number of assignments and tests. Students will have to make that week up somewhere.

On the other hand Professors have to take these days at some point, and I admire those who are standing up and telling the government what they think of the whole thing. Students can use that week to get geared up for the coming semester because, oh by the way, if you are one of the unfortunates who have an exam on Dec. 23, you'll have a grand total of 10 days for Christmas holidays (6 if you don't include weekends).

So what happens now? There are some dissenters who will not be canceling their classes. There have been rumors of a deal being struck whereby faculty will take two days during this time period and the other two at some other time. Some faculty are planning on taking their days when there are scheduled to invigilate exams.

Speaking for myself, I'd rather have those four days to work on assignments carried over from first semester and be a lecture behind than have my Prof absent from my final exam. Consider this a public pleading to the professors to tell their classes what their individual action will be. Nothing will hurt the students more than not knowing. Photo by Andie Baptista

SPACE FOR RANT Segregation Our Student Centre Too!

by Sean Clark
Staff Writer

I hope not everybody is as sick as I am of the ongoing debate about the presence of a "Women's Centre" on campus, because I'm afraid I'm going to push the debate one step further. I'm taking the offensive.

The L.U. women's centre has stated as policy that its purpose is to provide, "A safe and comfortable environment for women at Laurentian. We see the women's centre as a drop-in area aimed at freedom from harassment and intimidation, thus providing a female and feminist-positive environment which is presently non-existent at Laurentian."

I would like to begin by agreeing with this statement. To the best of my knowledge, there is no such area which provides a feminist-positive environment. From what I've seen, all of the social areas at Laurentian are "People Positive". I may be speaking for a limited percent of the Laurentian Community, but I thought that this was a good thing. Areas like the Student centre, Great Hall, T.V. lounge, the Pub and the SSR games room all provide healthy relaxing atmospheres for persons, regardless of gender, to enjoy the company of others as well as some down time away from the rigors of a student's hectic life.

I don't want to say by any means that the L.U. Women's centre is a waste of space or a useless service. In my opinion, it provides one of the most useful services on campus. Segregation.

Normally, I am not a strong proponent of this ideal, but in this case, I can certainly see a need for it. If every effort has been made to invite women into a healthy social atmosphere, but some still refuse and look for a place of their own, then I say let them go. Now when I'm sitting in the Pub or the T.V. room enjoying the company of friends, I can rest easier in the knowledge that the women in my company do not look upon me as "the enemy" or an "intimidation". I think it is a shame that some women cannot feel comfortable in the company of men, but I believe it is their shame.

I will concede that there are some men who derive some sick pleasure by manipulating weaker persons, but I would like to assure the women of the Women's Centre that they have not been the only victims. Men have been intimidated, harassed and even abused and assaulted by these bullies. But they stick it out. They do not alienate themselves from an entire population based on the actions of a few. That is prejudice, pure and simple. I don't think I need to cite any examples of where this ideal has taken humanity in the past.

So if some women in the Laurentian community wish to perpetuate the idea of cultural segregation, then that is their choice. I hope that there will soon come a day when these individuals will be able to sit in the company of men without feeling that they are being harassed or intimidated. In the mean time, I wholeheartedly endorse the financial support of the centre. I would like to see them get a T.V. and maybe even a Liquor license. That way I don't have to worry about offending anyone when I go to the Pub, or relax in the T.V. lounge.

As an aside, I wish to commend the Women's Centre Organization for their support of issues such as white Ribbon Week and the recent outcry against the "Intoxication Defense".

A truly intimidating sight

To the Editor:

I am writing in regards to the recent rebuttal written by the Women's Centre advocating the use of the Student Lounge as a Conference Centre.

It is my opinion that this rebuttal is juvenile. The letter to which it refers to raised many valid points.

Many students (most students) use this lounge as a place to relax between lectures and socialize. The hour you spent lecturing to me did drain my relaxation period. Many students come here because it is the only place at this university where one can relax in comfortable chairs. The cafeteria is impersonal. Sitting on the floor in the Bowling Alley does not appeal to me. The library is too quiet and the librarians are not too friendly when I socialize there. I have one hour in my day everyday where I can relax. I will be lectured to before and after this hour. I need not be silenced because the Women's Centre feels the need to inform me. This is my time. It is an infringement on my right when you take it away. It is an inconvenience.

If you noticed, during your very important lecture, the student population in the centre was reduced by 80%. Your message is an important one, but it must not be forced on your public. A newspaper or arranged lecture in a separate room would be a more appropriate forum. If students consider what you have to say valid they will participate. Otherwise, it is not worth the trouble. Forced or not, people only hear what they want to hear. Our fun is valid. Life consists of a balance of fun and work. Of you don't believe that, than you must lead a pretty boring life.

Interview With A Finance Minister

by Bruce Peters
Staff Writer

Last Thursday, the Ontario Minister of Finance, Floyd Laughren, came to Laurentian to talk about education issues, and presumably, to drum up some sort of support for the New Democrats in the provincial election that will be held some time in the next year. Mr. Laughren offered an explanation, more than anything else, about why his government has implemented certain social and financial policies, including increases to tuition fees. His main platform, amid contradictions and obfuscations, was that the province and the country have survived the worst of the recession, and that hopefully the governments' actions and policies will begin to show dividends soon.

To begin his speech, the Deputy Premier took a phrase from Douglas Coupland's book, Generation X. Floyd referred to "lesspectations", in which, "people expect less than when (he) was in school." He was describing the phenomenon in which people of this generation, with the same education, are being forced to expect less immediate rewards than their predecessors. There just aren't going to be the same immediate returns on the hard work and commitment involved in attending post-secondary institutions.

In truth, Laughren did not come off as entirely unsympathetic to students, but that would be sensible considering that the Laurentian University falls within his own riding of Nickel Belt. However, he spent much of his actual speech, explaining the reorganization of the public sector, and vindicating Rae-days, perhaps one of the most controversial aspects of New Democratic fiscal planning.

"We know that the last four years have been the toughest that we've seen in this province since the 1930s. That's not an exaggeration by any measurement you want to use. That's a whole generation and more that haven't experienced what's been going on. And not just in Ontario, but all across Canada." Mr. Laughren did offer a convincing argument. All of Canada has been through terrible economic times, and the Ontario government has done its best during all of it. He explained that a massive restructuring of the private sector has been necessary, and likely, most Ontarians would agree. Thus, the implementation of Rae-days: a way of reducing public expenditures without laying anyone off..

On the issue of tuition, Mr. Laughren was similarly aligned. "There are no easy answers," he proclaimed. He, more than once, referred to "a balance" that was necessary when discussing student subsidies. On one hand, "Pink Floyd" acknowledged that "it's not only students. ... that benefit from (post-secondary education). Other people do too. The rest of society benefits from a well-educated population. This is why I don't think (students) should have to pay at all, why the state should continue to pay a share. We're all better off when you're better educated." But he also acknowledged that significant enrollment increases over the last few years have increased the demand for subsidies from the federal and provincial governments, even though there have been large increases in tuition fees. There is simply not enough money available. As Mr. Laughren lectures, "the eighties are gone."

So, Floyd commiserates with students. Sure he does. It is curious, then, why so many of his statements deliberately contravened earlier comments. He said that everyone in society benefits from a well-educated population. In spite of this, during the question period which preceded the speech, he had explained that response from his constituents, presumably here in Sudbury, a few years ago indicated that there was a large lack of support for tuition freezes or reductions. He said that "people have been telling me and telling others that post-secondary students should count their blessings because they're the ones who get the biggest rewards when they're finished, not the person who's out there on the assembly line." It's clear that, like any politician, Mr. Laughren listens to the opinions of those who elect him, even if he knows that those opinion are naive and reactionary. Furthermore, it's good to know that Laurentian students have the support of the community that will someday be running.

Mr. Laughren admitted that Canada would be in a bad situation in the world technological and financial markets if only a small percentage of the population were university and college educated. "In the future, competitiveness is not going to be measured by how low your wage rate is in your country, it's going to be measured by the skills of the people " in the work force. He adds, "if we falter on our post-secondary education and our other programs, then we're in trouble, competitively, I believe. That's another reason for making sure we don't allow post-secondary education to be accessible only to people who have a lot of money."

Clearly, generalization, contradiction and obfuscation are what drive the political apparatus. Although Mr. Laughren did offer that, economically, the province is improving, and he did make the effort to empathize with students, he did not show any recourse to Lloyd Axworthy's federal government proposal which would increase tuition by as much as 100 percent. "If the Axworthy proposals go through, it would have a substantial effect on tuition fees, in our view, and we, as a province, cannot pick up the tab job every decision that the federal government makes."

Thanks
Floyd.

Women's Centre Fights Supreme Court Ruling

by Shira Katz
The Link

Montreal (CUP) — Concordia's Women's Centre has launched a petition against a recent Supreme Court of Canada ruling citing extreme drunkenness as a defense for rape. The petition will be sent to federal Justice Minister Allan Rock.

Program co-ordinator Emily Paradis says the petition is very important as an educational and empowerment tool.

"I don't have a lot of faith in the legal system to rectify the situation of violence against women on its own," Paradis said.

"The petition might make a difference most importantly as an educational tool, so that men and women will start talking about what role misogyny and alcohol play in their lives. The petition is also very empowering because it allows people to take a stance on this issue."

The Supreme Court of Canada ruled that 72-year old Henri Daviault could use extreme drunkenness as a defense for rape.

Daviault is accused of raping a 65-year old woman after consuming seven or eight beers and 40 ounces of brandy. A Quebec Superior Court found him not guilty, but a new trial in the Quebec Court of Appeals later found him guilty. It held that extreme intoxication — equal to insanity — cannot be used as a defense for sexual assault.

However, when Daviault appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, it ordered a new trial based on the ruling that extreme intoxication can be used as a defense for sexual assault, with the burden of proof resting on the accused.

Justice Minister Allan Rock has promised to study the implications of the judgment. He plans to release a paper discussing how to stiffen penalties for criminal intoxication.

Estel Gravel, Crown Prosecutor responsible for the Montreal court house sexual assault case team, feels the ruling won't pose a problem.

"I don't see a big problem because it's very limited, very restrained. We're talking about an extreme drunkenness, equivalent to automatism or mental alienation. To use this defense, the witness will have to prove that it was extreme drunkenness with an expert," Gravel said.

"It won't be possible for most people to this defense because it's necessary to prove that you aren't there in your mind."

Despite claims to the rarity for sexual assault, women's groups are more worried about the social implications of the decision.

"The decision implies an excuse for sexual assault. It matters very little how the court interprets the decision if men think it gives them a license for sexual assault," Paradis said.

Michelle Seguin, co-ordinator at the Office of Status for Women at Concordia, agrees that rape is indefensible.

"It's not a disease; it's a deliberate choice. Intoxicated or not, a person is responsible for their actions," she said.

But according to Gravel, a person might be too drunk to know his or her intention.

"To commit a crime we have to do something knowing it's bad. Sometimes we are unable to prove the intention. In a crime it's necessary to prove the act and the intention," Gravel said.

The ruling will be applied to other crimes as well, she added.

"If it was murder, for example, he will be fined for manslaughter, not murder, and it's the same thing with sexual assault. It will only be used as a defense in extreme drunkenness."

But Seguin is worried that this law could undermine the problem of sexual assault and violence against women. According to Seguin, women will not be treated fairly.

"Sexual assault won't be considered as serious as a crime so this law is like going back. The Supreme Court did say that it applies to all crimes, we know that, but sexual assault won't be treated the same way," Seguin said.

In the meantime, the Women's Centre will continue its protest efforts. Paradis plans to bring up the issue at the annual December 6 demonstration which protests all forms of violence against women.

"We are presently trying to educate people on campus about the link between alcohol and date rape. We know that the judges said that drunkenness will hardly ever be used as defense since a certain amount of drunkenness is required," Paradis said.

"Despite that, men may still use it as a license to get drunk and rape somebody. So it's not only the legal ramifications we're protesting — it's the social ramifications as well."

Bonin on Education and others are not. Some of these opinions contradict themselves.

Steve Cardinali and myself met with Ray Bonin, our local MP, last Monday. We had been hoping that this meeting would have given us a little insight into the mysterious world of Social Policy Reform. We were somewhat disappointed. No, let me rephrase that, we are really no farther ahead than before the meeting. Unless of course, you count the frustration level.

Mr. Bonin informed us that he no longer sits on the Human Resources committee which produced the discussion paper. However, he did sit on it until Sept, so he had been involved with the hearings, and had listened to all the presentations. I say listened, because I'm not convinced that he heard a word of it. He let us know right off that he was not prepared to answer questions, but would rather hear out comments which he would then relay to the appropriate bodies.

Steve and I asked questions anyway. Then we gave our comments. For us, it was just as important to hear his opinions on a number of issues which concerned us. We talked about things like the income contingency loans, privatized student loans, privatized universities, and the "Learning Passport" mentioned in the discussion paper. Needless to say, the only thing which surprised us about the responses was the inconsistency. Some of these issues are favored by Mr. Bonin, Let's begin with student loans and the govt. Mr. Bonin assured us that the current system will remain in place. Income contingency will be a fund of new money (?), which will be available to those who are not eligible or do not like the old system. Regardless of how many times Steve and I pointed out that the "new money" was the cash transfer from the Federal govt which had been occurring for years, he still insisted that it was new money. According to the Mr. Bonin, there is no question that in 10 years, the Federal govt will be entirely out of the Education business. Several comments were made to the effect that if this proposed funding formula for ICRP was unacceptable to students, that's OK, it is $2.2 billion which can be used elsewhere. When questioned about the students ability to pay back the ICRP loan, the issue of interest levels, and the ever growing debt, Mr. Bonin suggested that students who think it is going to take a long time to pay back that loan, should go to another institution, and take out a loan to pay for their student loans. You do the math. I think you'll come up with the same answer I did. Students are still losing BIG!

We spent a great deal of time discussing the issue of banks issuing student loans which are not guaranteed by the govt. One of the important things, I felt, was to mention the horrible failure this system has been for students of Nova Scotia. A large number of students who would have qualified for loans under the old system were turned down, due to a poor credit rating. A poor credit rating may result from a late payment of a phone bill, or missing a payment on a credit card, simple things, which are certainly not to be taken lightly, but are facts of everyday life for many students. Mr. Bonin agreed with the banks, that these people are poor investments, and not a good risk, and should not be eligible for student loans. At this point my nostrils began to flare!! I asked for clarification. What I was hearing was that people with poor credit histories do not deserve access to education. Mr. Bonin suggested that these people deserve to be educated, but do not deserve to receive a loan to fund their education. Sounds like the same thing to me.

Changing topics, to save our sanity, we questioned Mr. Bonin on the concept of a "Learning Passport", which is outlined in the discussion paper. I asked how they planned to ensure equal quality across the board, in all provinces, amongst all institutions, if the Federal govt planned to no longer be involved with Education. Mr. Bonin quickly admitted that this would be very difficult and hard to control. He stated that it is an ideal, but that it would not really be the problem of the Feds anymore, it would be up to the provinces to reach agreements.

A few other things were discussed which resulted in no answers, and little sense for that matter. Steve raised a point surrounding the govt numbers which state that only 26% of students rely on student aid. It was pointed out that although this may be a national average, Mr. Bonin represents students in Northern Ont, where that number is 62%. We asked that he pass on this information, and consider the consequences for people in his riding. His response was along the lines of, we can't just fix the system for one area, or interest group. It has to be done for the nation as a whole. Fair enough, we could accept that, but should you not be speaking up on issues which are going to have serious detrimental effects on the region you represent. Should we accept something which may be great for Alb, but screw over Northern Ont. We think not. I asked for his opinion on privatization of Uni. Surprisingly enough, after all the other disturbing things he said, Mr. Bonin, and I quote, "would hate to see it happen"!!!! Finally. This was just about the only thing we agreed upon during the entire hour we spent with him.

On a positive note, we could all agree, "absolutely", that society as a whole, benefits from an educated society. He thinks that the discussion paper is reflective of that. Unfortunately, we don't think so.

In closing, we congratulate Mr. Bonin, and the Federal govt for taking the time and effort to distribute this first as a discussion paper. We are pleased to see that they are taking the time to speak with the general population that elected them and looking for input into the policies they wish to implement. We will reserve full congratulations until we find out if all this consultation matters. Somehow, I think they are likely to ask us, then pass their policies, saying that we really didn't understand what it is they were trying to do. But, until then, we will continue to provide input.

A public forum will be held on Fri Nov 25 in the student centre. Mr. Bonin will be on hand to hear presentations on the Social Policy Reform paper. He is not prepared to answer questions, but will listen to what we have to say. If you are interested in making a presentation, please contact either Steve or myself in the SGA office. If not, please come out and listen, and Get the Facts!

L.U. Allocated Infrastructure Funds

by Janice Savage
Editor-in-Chief

Health Minister Diane Marleau and MPP Sharon Murdock were on hand Thurs Nov 10 to announce the allocation of almost $2.7 million of infrastructure money to projects at L. U. and Cambrian College.

Laurentian's allocation of $1,515,000 will go to projects including the replacement of the gymnasium floor in the Ben Avery Physical Education Complex, repairing ventilation systems in two laboratories and renovations to the R.D. Parker Building including an elevator and floor upgrades. It is estimated that this work will create 215 person weeks of work which will be beginning shortly.

At the same time, Cambrian College will be granted $1,174,200 to enhance the Special Needs Regional Resource Centre. In total, this announcement means an additional 47 jobs to the area.

During Thursday's press conference, Diane Marleau called attention to the gains that have been made by the Canada/Ontario Infrastructure Works Program saying that it is a good example of "different levels of government working together".

Sharon Murdock, who was also on hand announced that $2.1 billion has been allocated to various sectors of the province including municipalities, boards, universities and colleges through the program.

Dr. Ross Paul, President of Laurentian University, sighted three significant aspects of the allocation of these funds. First, he concurred with Ms. Marleau that the allocation of Infrastructure funds represents cooperative federalism that works. Secondly he pointed out the improvements that would come about as a result of these new projects saying that they will make a "tremendous difference" to the university. Third, Dr. Paul acknowledges the benefits of creating new jobs for the region.

Canada/Ontario Infrastructure Works is a shared cost program between the federal and provincial levels of government and local contributors. The aim is to create new jobs by allocating funds to projects of local concern. The projects at Laurentian and Cambrian are expected to be completed by Dec. 1995.

Youth Service kicks into high gear

Human Resources
Development Canada

Ottawa - Lloyd Axworthy, Minister for Human Resources Development Canada, and Ethel Blondin-Andrew, the Secretary of State for Training and Youth, today announced the start of the regular operational phase of Youth Service Canada (YSC) by issuing a call for project proposals.

From the YSC lead-site project at the Rideau Street Youth Initiative in Ottawa, Axworthy pointed to Youth Service Canada as an example of a social program that solves problems by investing in people's futures. "We are helping young people to gain work experience and job skills that will open doors to the world of work and create a feeling of independence - a 'can do' attitude," said Axworthy. By creating opportunity, investing in people and forging new community-based partnerships, Youth Service Canada demonstrates some of the key principles for improving social security in Canada.

"Youth Service Canada personifies young people who stand prouder, walk taller and speak with greater confidence about the good they can accomplish for themselves and their communities," said Blondin-Andrew from the YSC lead-site project at the Public Housing Literacy Project in Toronto, as she called on communities to plant that seed of hope in the young people.

Any community-based group, band council or other organization interested in youth and community development can apply to sponsor a Youth Service Canada project. Applications and guidelines are now available through Canada Employment Centers (CECs), which are listed under "Human Resources" in the Government of Canada pages of your telephone book. Project proposals will be welcome on an ongoing intake basis with projects in the first part of the operational phase expected to be underway early in 1995.

Youth Service Canada is already making a difference. Instead of feeling like victims of unemployment, out-of-work youth become victors. For example, a Youth Service Canada lead-site project sponsored by the Family Service Bureau of Regina helps teen mothers gain personal and job skills, and at the same time strengthens their sense of accomplishment and self-esteem. Said one 19-year-old participant, "If this program wasn't here, I don't know what I would have done."

Youth Service Canada has a 1994-95 budget of $25 million, of which $15 million is budgeted for the regular operational phase. The remainder is being spent on the 67 lead-site projects now underway and involving 1,100 out of school, out of work young people 18 to 24 years of age.

Funding for this program was provided for in the February 1994 federal budget and is therefore built into the existing fiscal framework. Today's announcement is an example of how this government is prioritizing its spending to better serve Canadians by making efficient use of tax dollars.

There hasn't been this much in Supreme Court decisions since abortion, but it's not surprising considering foolish decisions that have come down. The recent decision concerning a 72 year old man who drank so much that he wasn't aware of his actions, and ended up raping a 65 year old woman was idiotic. In my law classes I was taught that inebriation wasn't a defense, but apparently the Court doesn't think that any longer. I'm not going to speak on the decision itself, other than to say that I think it was wrong, even if it only applies to that case. Yeah right.

What I am going to address is the feminists response to the decision. For the most part, they are completely right. This opens up avenues that I don't think that any sane person would want to go down. Alcohol is not an excuse for sexual assault, and for that matter, nothing is.

What strikes me about many feminists is the hypocrisy that came with their outrage to this decision. In the past, I've heard many of these same women say, "If a woman is drunk, then it is the man's responsibility as to what happens to her". Not only does this strike me as being completely opposed to feminist ideology, but it is ludicrous. I always understood, according to feminists, that a woman is responsible to herself alone and does not need something as low as a man to make sure that she's okay. Apparently the exception comes when a woman is drunk.

If a woman is not responsible for her actions when drunk, then I say a man isn't either. After all, if we want true equality, then that statement is entirely logical. Of course, having said that, I guess I'm a misogynist or worse.

I believe that both parties are responsible for their actions. A man or woman, drunk, has to come to grips with the fact that alcohol is not an excuse, nor is it an opportunity to diffuse responsibility. You can't claim that men aren't responsible for women, then claim that alcohol is a special circumstance where men have to act with that hated chivalry.

The Supreme Court has to realize that their decision was wrong, and many people have realized that cases have to be judged on a case by case basis. We can't condemn either side until we make sure we know what the facts are, and most importantly, we can't allow ideologies to intrude on our weighing of the facts. Of course, I could be drunk writing this so maybe I don't know what I'm talking about...

I don't care what the American people's rationale was for voting the Republicans into control of the Congress, but I am happy that Clinton will now be responsible for his actions. For the first time, there will be a check against his radical leftist policies. If Clinton thought he couldn't get anything done with a Democrat Congress, wait until he tangles with Bob Dole....Congrats fellow conservatives!

White Ribbon Campaign - Nov. 26th to Dec. 3rd

by Alex B. Wilde
Contributor

We will soon have ribbons to be given out. I realize that lately we've been ribboned out for every conceivable cause. This is not just any cause, this is a problem we have in our society. The problem is that men, from the time they were boys, have been taught implicitly or explicitly that violence is a viable solution. I am a member of this society and I ing!!! These are just some of the phrases I heard at the local movie theater recently when I saw the movie Frankenstein. Quite an excellent film really, but every time something violent occurred, I got the privilege of listening to the above comments. And it made me wonder about just where violence is going and how it really affects our society.

Recently, the TV show, The Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, was rated as being too violent for children to watch. I've actually seen a couple of episodes of this production, and to be honest, I find them very laughable. The acting is some of the most pathetic I've ever seen, the story line is as exciting as a loaf of bread, and the action sequences are truly drab in comparison to anything else in recent memory.

But I'm considered an adult, and I realize that this show is not reality. What about the 5-year old child who believes that this is real and something they should imitate? Do they understand that it's wrong to hurt others, and that others can be hurt by what they do? I mean, on the TV show, no matter what happens to the heroes, they always come out okay in the end. It's true that children don't understand their actions, and that they often do things that they don't understand.

What then is to be done about the violent TV shows that influence children to behave in a violent manner? We could lock the child up in their rooms for hours at a time, keeping them safe from harm. Or how about just banning these violent shows from television altogether. Neither of these solutions really work though. The first one is irrational, and the second one is censorship, of which their is too much in society already.

And it's always the parents of some child, parents that seem to have nothing better to do than bother other people and restrict fun that voice complaints of their children becoming too violent. Well, I thought about it, and came up with a novel idea. Instead of wasting time and censoring other people's children, why don't you take care of your own child and see what they are actually watching. I realize that looking after your own offspring is a really unique idea, but my parents tried it, and I'm not an remember Peter Puck....I love Bugs Bunny....and I sometimes wished that the Coyote would catch the Road Runner, but...I would never hit my girlfriend. Violence is not a solution and has no place in Canadian society. This isn't the United States, this is Canada, we should know better. Men's violence against women isn't something that we see everyday but it exists. The White Ribbon Campaign is an attempt at raising awareness about the issue of men's violence. As men we have to talk about our not accepting violence. Please wear a white ribbon to show your support. This violence exists and it is not just uneducated blue-collar workers after they drink. It is the forms of coercion, sexual or otherwise, domineering behavior all the way up to murder. But the end opposite from murder on that continuum is often the most disturbing, the silent support. When we as men hear a joke or comment that bothers us and we say nothing. These white ribbons are a way of "breaking the silence". When this week arrives please show your support and wear a white ribbon.

I would like to say that real men don't hit women, but it is not true — men hit women, lets change that truth.

overly aggressive child. These parents who have too much time on their hands should try reading their children a book, or maybe watching an educational program with them, like Sesame Street.

I'm not saying that this is going to solve all the problems that affect children. This violent TV show is scary, but if you really want to turn your kid into a social monster, let them watch the evening news for a couple of weeks. The things I see on that particular time slot scares me a hell of a lot more than the Power

Rangers.

To conclude, I fail to see how such a laughable show can influence violence in children, but if it does seem to be influencing your child, don't let them watch it. Don't restrict other people's children, as it's hard enough raising your own. Censorship is really not a good thing, and it's bad enough if you have to censor your own kids viewing activities. Don't ban the show, just don't let your own children watch it if your afraid of their sensibilities.

Lambda Goes Hollywood

by Jon Norris
Contributor

Since this is my first time doing this, I thought I'd start off with a brief review of a few films I've recently seen. I'll begin with those films which are still in theatrical release.

Although CBC rated Pulp Fiction as one of the top ten films of the year, I'm beginning to believe that they must be partners-in-crime with Maclean's magazine. Obviously they share the same fantastical system of rating. It was a little disturbing and a little funny, but definitely not a top ten film. However, it was a fine film, in the same style as Reservoir Dogs, but I think audiences were wooed too easily by the non-linear editing of the vignettes. Tarantino could have done much better than Pulp trash.

If I haven't warned you soon enough, then I apologize. If it's not too late, heed my warning, don't go to see Branagh's Frankenstein! In the words of Mallory Knox, it's "Bad, bad, bad, bad, bad." The soundtrack is bad, the lighting is bad, the acting is bad, and although their interpretation of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein is better than any to date, that's not saying much.

Stargate is a film that had a lot of potential. It was a great sci-fi film for the first third of the movie. After that it lost all of its potential energy and turned into a farcical combination of Indiana Jones and the whole

Ewok thing from Return of the Jedi. Even though it stole ideas left and right, I won't completely condemn it. After all, it was almost entertaining.

The rest of the films I'd like to discuss are no longer in theaters, but some of them should soon be released to video.

From the often predictable director Oliver Stone, comes an unexpected cinematic experience firing with both barrels loaded. Of course, everyone knows that I'm talking about Natural Born Killers. It's a film with a great soundtrack and hallucinatory effects achieved through a seamless composite of 35mm color and B&W, B&W 16mm, Super 8, Hi8, Beta, and bits of animation, rear- and front-projection, and footage from past Stone films. For myself the film served two important functions. First, to prepare us for a new visual experience and secondly, as a critique of our own TV/violence oriented society. Cinematographer Robert Richardson said that shooting the film became a living nightmare, as memories of his own unpleasant childhood resurfaced, eventually leading to an abuse of sleeping pills. I have one final thing to say about NBK. To all those who laughed during the "I Love Mallory" sequence (the loving family gone nuclear) — you don't belong in university. You're obviously not here in search of the truth!

Unfortunately, the following two films will probably not be available on video in wide distribution. Go Fish, the eagerly awaited lesbian feature from Rose Troche and Gwen Taylo, was well worth the wait. An amazingly beautiful film which centres around the hip-hop artist Max, and her developing love with the boyish hippie Ely. Funny and fresh in style, Go Fish goes much deeper than its title suggests.

Kika is another sexy/bizarre film from Pedro Almodovar. It's similar to NBK in its exploration of the video image and tabloid TV journalism, but is not as stylized. There is one very disturbing sequence in which a rape scene is trivialized in an attempt to elicit laughter. You can call this dark humor if you like, but I don't think of rape as being humorous in any form. The scene plays in the film, still has prob-

Admittedly a dual role but it is ets, exotic macaws, exotic dancers, and exotic circumstances. Like The Adjuster, Exotica allows our assumptions to form freely and then subtly destroys them. The film skillfully plays out a few interrelated themes.

How, and with what, does one replace what has been lost (reminiscent of The Adjuster)? What are the rules in our society governing how to be a responsible voyeur? Is it possible to discard the habinial, or inherited patterns passed onto us by our parents? Finally, in a world where nothing is free, things being constantly exchanged for services rendered, is there ever an end to this cycle? Were other films have failed, Exotica easily succeeds in an uncomfortable implication of the audience into this world of voyeurs lacking, and searching for, validation. I won't reveal the plot because this film is far too interesting for such an injustice. Look for it soon on video, released by Alliance.

Also keep an eye out for Adventures of Priscella, Queen of the Desert, Star Trek: Generations, and Interview with the Vampire. Just don't forget to put it (your eye) back in!

Thorneloe University held its annual Coffee House Friday night, welcoming the talents of the Laurentian community. While the evening was well attended, only a few musicians answered the call and offered up their talents for the amusement of the crowd. The evening was kicked off with a light harmonica performance which culminated in a rendition of "The Bird Dance" accompanied by a mandolin.

The first band, comprised mostly of Thorneloe residents, performed a mix of cover and original material which kept those in attendance amused for the better part of an hour. The only other band to perform was lead by the community priest, Jeff Woodcroft who, along with his group of "thirty-something" rock stars, ended the show with their own collection of original material. Despite requests from some of the attendees, "Smokin' in the Boys Room" was not played.

While the focus of the evening was light hearted entertainment, the price of admission was serious. All those in attendance were asked to donate canned goods to contribute to the Laurentian food drive.

For those who missed the show, there's always next year. Or, if there is interest, that is if we can convince Jeff to do it all over again, there just may be another coffee house this winter.

The Philosopher Kings

by Dave Miner
Staff Writer

On Saturday, October 22nd, the patrons of the Townhouse were treated to an amazing show courtesy of Endless Summer veterans, The Philosopher Kings. The guys (singer Gerald Eaton, guitarists James McCollum and Brian West, keyboardist Jon (Jo) Levine, bassist Jason (Ja) Levine, and drummer Craig Hunter) were kind enough to let me interrupt their eating and answer a few questions

L: Have any of you guys been reading Plato at all?

GE: I see you've done your research. Now, you are ready for the next level. (Laughter) A lot of us have read Plato. I was actually a political science major, and I'm sure...

Jo: Which puts the onus on you...

GE: I'll field this one. It was just a joke at first, that was the idea, and, after we stopped laughing...The name is just based on Plato's theory where a group of elites should rule society, so it was kind of a pompous joke, although, we thought of world domination. (Laughs)

L: You guys all knew each other through school, right?

BW: Basically, yeah. Jay and Don and Gerald and I have known each other since high school, and the rest, we met in Jazz school.

L: I had actually seen you guys on MuchMusic, I guess it was a year ago, the name of the video was "What have you done with..."

ALL: ...Buddy Boldin's Body."

L: Can that be found on any other release that you have out?

JA: That, well, only I know where it is. No, that's not on anything that's released. We're just sort of in a different place now.

JO: There were a whole bunch of songs that we'd written, about fifteen or twenty songs, and we got signed on the basis of those songs, and I think two of them are on the album, and the rest have been written after we kind of...Everything's happened so quickly, in terms of the progression of the band. I think that the songs that we were writing at that time were sort of in a different vein.

L: So no plans of releasing those?

JO: Well, there's no plans, but it's not impossible. A lot of the time, a lot of the songs on the album, we find we rework the songs all the time. Month to month, a song could sound completely different. We just start to improvise live, and it comes out differently all the time.

L: Why does the Philosopher Kings exist in the form that it does? Why did you decide to come out with the musical sound that you have?

JO: The thing is, it's what we like. That's our background. We're trained in Jazz.

L: There are a lot of different styles evident on the album. Has that been a problem for you guys, or more of a boon?

BW: I don't know. I think that at first we thought it was going to be a problem, but, out to be kind of a plus. What I find is that the stuff we were originally doing was more varied; from song to song it would sound different. You could hear one style clearly in one song, and a different style in another song. Now it seems...my perception of the album is that it seems like every song is a whole bunch of things together instead of it being song to song. There is a lot of different influences for sure, everything from jazz to hip-hop to rap, whatever...

JO: I think a lot of it has to do with the fact that we're very new. I mean, we've only been together a year-and-a-half. But I think the reason why there is a drastic difference between what you might have seen with "Buddy Boldin" is that it takes time to fall into a direction. We're always changing, we're always coming closer to whatever our direction is, and I think that's happening naturally. It's not like we're saying, "Oh, let's make it more jazzy for this, let's make it more hip-hop."

Mr. Punch, Sin City and Urban Legends

by The Prisoner of Reality
Hey Kids,

The hottest book on the market today is Vertigo's Mr. Punch. This graphic novel by Neil Gaiman and Dave McKean is going to be hard to find. The print run was set at 15,000 but orders totaled 18,000. This means allocations are being set up so that retailers get some of their orders. According to the two local comic shop owners, the allocation works out to 85%. This lack of availability means that demand will be stronger than ever. Mr. Punch is the story of growing up, a rite of passage into the not-always-pleasant world of adulthood. It will be on everyone's Best of... lists in '95. Are you one of the lucky ones who got their hands on an already rare copy? Wanna sell it?

Dark Horse/Legend Comics is proud to present Sin City: The Big Fat Kill by Frank Miller. This is Miller's third foray into the classic urban jungle. Dwight, the hero, gets involved in a terrible situation that just keeps getting worse. The story begins with Dwight trying to stop a group of men who make the mistake of attacking a woman in Old Town. The women of Old Town mete out their own brand of justice on the men but when it turns out that the deceased were policemen, life in Old Town will never be the same. The police move in to close Old Town, the mob moves in to take over and Dwight is stuck in the middle. Sin City: The Big Fat Kill #1 is the first installment in a five-issue miniseries and scheduled for release this week (November 17).

Have you heard any urban legends lately? You know, those friend-of-a-friend-of-a-neighbor stories, like the young baby-sitter who got stoned/drunk (varies according to who's telling the story) and put the baby in the oven. Or how about the woman who returned from a Caribbean vacation with a strange infection on her cheek that wouldn't go away and kept growing. Remember, she went insane when she scratched her cheek and thousands of baby spiders began streaming out. Paradox Press is offering The Big Book Of Urban Legends, over two hundred pages of short features centering on this common theme. The creative talent on this book includes some of the best known, most influential artist/pencillers/inkers in the industry. The addictiveness of this book is the compelling subject matter. Once you flip through a few pages of this off-beat publication, you'll have to have a copy for yourself. Its suggested retail is set at $12.95 (US). Nuff said.

The Cult - Untitled

by The Prisoner of Reality

The last few albums by the Cult, let's be honest, have been crap. I heard that they were going through tough times, what with stuff like Ian Astbury refusing to talk to anyone who didn't address him as Wolf Child. Yeah, ok!

But it would seem that they're back on track with this disc. Back with a vengeance actually. 12 songs rendered in typical rockin' Cult style. The first track off the album is Coming Down.

You've heard it on the radio and that's but a sample of the remainder of the album. Gone, Naturally High and Be Free are Astbury at his gritty best. If you're a fan, pick up the album. If you're not a fan, now would be good time to check out the Cult.

Megadeth - Youthanasia

by Poobah
Contributor

When I first play a new album, I fumble through each tune quickly and search for those tasty chops and grooves I long for (and need, in order to justify gambling twenty bones for a disk). Well, Mustaine's latest required three solid start to finish sessions in order for myself to locate my musical fix. The first two tunes are cool, "Reckoning Day" and "Train of Consequences". Track six, "The Killing Road", is smokin' but that's it. If I can't get at least four or five good tunes out of a disk (especially Megadeth's) I'm not happy. A band might as well record on 45's because I have no use for either of them. If you seen Megadeth on the Jon Stewart show you'd buy any of their stuff. Mustaine sounded like a starving, whining, diaper filled baby. However, the rest of the band smoked. Dave was also interviewed by Jon Stewart and Much Music, and need I say, he's still the same egotistical, self-centered, power control freak we've endured to admire as Megadeth evolves.

This disk is a definite let down for the hard-core "Mega-fans". Pick it up for your collection, but otherwise, get a bud to tape it for you. I've seen Megadeth with Suicidal Tendencies in T.O. and again at the "Clash of the Titans" in Detroit (also featuring Alice in Chains, Anthrax and Slayer). Both shows were mosh-pit stoked frenzies. I also have all the Megadeth CD's, and this one isn't comparable. I expected a more heavier, powerful "death" effort. I'm not quit positive where they plan on taking this musical direction. It's slower and mellower compared to "Countdown to Extinction", for that matter weaker than all their other disks too. Actually, there's four good tunes, "Victory" is a cool compilation of some of their previous song titles like "Anarchy" to "Set the World on Fire", Pain of "Hook in Mouth", "In My Darkest Hour", "Corruption of the World", "Peace Sells...But Nobody's Buying" (this disk, ha, ha).

Well, I guess I received my four songs, so I should be happy but I'm not. Listen to their last album and see what I'm saying. For a Megadeth disk, it just doesn't cut it. So if you got $20+ to blow, grab it. Or let me give you a suggestion. Spend your money wisely with a buddy on two jugs of draught or two hot home made lunches and a game of pool at the International Hotel (tip and tax included), can't beat that. Oh yeah, Dave, on track four "Tout le Monde", do us all a favor and leave the French lyrics to Roch Voisine.

Skrew - Dusted

by Poobah
Contributor

Industrial mayhem at it's finest. I never heard of Skrew before I purchases the disk. Maybe subliminally I recalled the name of the band? Anyhow, the cover was cool so I took a chance. Also, how could you pass up a band that has a song called "Jesus Skrew Superstar", ya know they're gonna be hardcore. If you throw Ministry, NIN, Malhavoc and the Butthole Surfers in a blender, voila, Skrew is conjured. Crunchy riffs, raunchy vocals, and some cryptic keyboards spit out my favourite tune, "Seeded". Then you get kicked in the head by "Picasso's Trigger". The rest of the album is somewhat repetitive, but interesting. If you want a taste of something obscure, do everybody a favour and go Skrew yourself!

Country and Western Goes Politically Correct

by Cyn Loisele
Staff Writer

I'm going to warn you right now: If you can't stand country music, this review is not for you. Ok., faithful readers, here it is...one album that's got it all, Brooks and Dunn and Mary Chapin Carpenter to Dolly Parton, Willie Nelson and Johnny Cash. It's a must have for every country music fan. The eternally conservative country music genre has decided to enter the arena of AIDS awareness. Red Hot + Country is a compilation of Nashville's best with net proceeds distributed to various AIDS organizations around the world.

The music isn't half bad. "Teach Your Children" by Suzy Boguss, Alison Krauss and Kathy Mattea with Crosby, Stills and Nash is a great melody to start the album off. It's quaint, simple and typically country. And that old country twang is clearly represented in songs like "Folsom Prison Blues" (Brooks and Dunn with Johnny Cash, and "Close up the Honkey Tonks" (Radney Foster). One major disappointment is a pathetic cover of Patsy Cline's "Crazy" by Jimmy Dale Gilmour with Willie Nelson. I can't begin to describe the havoc this song wreaked on my ears. Whoever it was who told Jimmy Dale Gilmour he could sing ballads, they should be taken out and shot. I guess Willie Nelson has abused his voice to the point of wretchedness. I am by no means a Patsy Cline fan (trust me), but leave the lady's song alone. Anyway, except for one black mark, it's an amazing CD that every country fan should have in their collection, and hey, you're supporting a great cause too. (P.S. Just skip track six).

Testament - Low

by Poobah
Contributor

I believe the new Testament CD is their hardest and heaviest ever. By all means I'm not saying the old Testament isn't worthy. This disk has a little smidgen of everything, thrash, death, power ballad, even a couple of instrumentals. A must buy for old and new Testament followers. Chuck Billy's vocals shredded the tweeters out of my speakers and the deafening assault of Eric Peterson's and James Murphy's guitar rituals left my cat Tony in some state of dementia. The poor feline won't go anywhere near the stereo. Keep an ear open for the tunes, "Low" "Legions", "Hail Mary", "Shades of War", "Dog Faced Gods", and "All I Could Bleed".

Low will keep you head, hair and mosh pits flowin' till their next piece of work comes out. Caution: If you don't want your household pet in that infamous cemetery with my cat Tony, put them outside and save their sanity while spinning Testament's new album Low.

Kill Creek - St. Valentines Garage

by Kevin Forman
Staff Writer

Imagine putting together a band with mellower Kurt Cobain vocals, punked up Pearl Jam guitars, and a Smashing Pumpkins drum beat. With this mix you end up with a group that sounds like Kill Creek. But to say that these guys fit into a mold known as "alternative" is one of the greatest injustices that could happen to them. Even though they have a sound that can be identified with other groups, they come across with a hard hitting, unique style that they are able to call their own.

The quartet hails from the American midwest region, but the tracks on their album remind of nothing I have ever experienced from that region. Starting with the first song, "Cosmetic Surgery", the album shows itself to be comprised of hard, fast and raucous songs that are truly enjoyable to listen to. Infusing warmth, and punch on all the tunes, as well as the patented K.C.P.P.C. (that's Kill Creek power pop chorus), most notably on "Harass" and "wuss cliff".

Overall, Kill Creek is an exceptional pop-punk band with good, original material, and a truly infectious sound. This is an album that is definitely worth checking out on your next visit to your local music dealer.

Aerosmith - Big Ones

by The Prisoner of Reality

Before I begin with the review, I just wanted to let you know I was prepared to kill anyone who got in the way of me getting this disc for review. We get so little real, good music that, in the past, blood has been shed during CD handouts. (The preceding was the express opinion of the reviewer and if you don't like, and you know who you are, ^#@W#%^^@#!)

Now, on to the review. This 15-track disc contains the best from Aerosmith's last three albums Permanent Vacation, Pump and Get a Grip. From Love In An Elevator, Rag Doll and What It Takes to Cryin', Livin' On The Edge and Eat The Rich, you can't go wrong with this album. There are three tracks worth noting. First Deuces Are Wild from the Beavis and Butthead album. That's all I'm saying because I abhor Beavis and Butthead. Next are two never-before-heard tracks, Walk On Water and Blind Man.. Aerosmith truly rocks and is in great form. Now, if you have the last three albums, you might not be inclined to get this disc. But, it is a compilation of their best work and the two bonus tracks are worth checking out.

Another View of The Interview...

by Tara D'Angelo
Staff Writer

Anyone who remembers the first issue of Lambda this year may recall Mr. Loewenberg's comment about how a review of the latest Tom Cruise flick would not be printed. Well, too bad, here it is.

Much anticipation has surrounded the cinematic release of Anne Rice's Interview With The Vampire starring Tom Cruise, Brad Pitt, Antonio Banderas, Christian Slater and Kirsten Dunst.

Perhaps it is because controversy has surrounded this movie from the very beginning. First, Rice very vocally disapproved of the casting of Cruise as Lestat, as did many of her fans. After the film was made and she saw a preview, she took back her statement, saying the casting couldn't have been better. Second, the role of the Interviewer had to be recast halfway through the making due to the untimely death of River Phoenix.

As a whole, I thought the movie was excellent. The scenery and costumes were fantastic and the music added a haunting effect. Rice did the screenplay herself so the movie was very much like the book with only a few discrepancies. For example, in the movie Louis (Brad Pitt) mourns the loss of his wife and child, in the book, it is his brother who dies.

Another excellent aspect to the movie was the casting. Kirsten Dunst was phenomenal as Claudia, the child vampire with the mind of a woman who becomes the "daughter" of Lestat and Louis. Christian Slater wonderfully fit the part of the Interviewer although I spent a great deal of time trying to picture River Phoenix in the role. Antonio Banderas (who looks a bit too much like the lead singer of Extreme) was well suited, but a little old for the role of the four hundred year old vampire, Armand.

The most surprising performances however were that of Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt. Cruise, as the elegant, snobbish vampire Lestat, did an excellent job despite the initial disapproval of Rice and her fans.

This performance, I'm sure will show the world that he is more than just a pretty face.

With everyone's attention focused on Cruise, people seem to forget Brad Pitt. He was the perfect Louis with just the right combination of good looks and charm coupled with a troubled quality that is evident in the pages of Rice's novel.

This movie has everything. It is frightening, with a few good "jump-out-of-your-seat" moments and yet sad in parts. There are also several downright funny spots. (There are also several examples of really great hair which I think is a bit of a travesty because they are all on men with the exception of Claudia).

The only problem I had with this movie was the scene where Lestat flew. Anyone who has read all four of the Vampire Chronicles knows that Lestat did not learn to fly until the third novel Queen of The Damned. Other than that, I would have to give this movie two Sissy Hankshaw thumbs up.

INTERVIEW WITH THE VAMPIRE

by Dave Miner

Staff Writer

If you have ever read any of the Vampire Chronicles, prepare to be disappointed. Now, this film is absolutely fantastic, but no director is talented enough to create the same kind of imagery that Ann Rice's words conjure forth in your fevered imaginings. The other problem I had with the picture was that in order to fit the centuries of Louis' life as a vampire into two hours, almost all of the small details, which I felt made the novels so outstanding, were sacrificed in the name of brevity. In short, this movie is only the Coles Notes of Interview with the Vampire. However, as a stand-alone piece, this is easily the best movie I've seen this year. Surely you have heard about the central controversy surrounding the movie: Anne Rice hit the roof when she found out the role of the Vampire Lestat was to be played by Tom Cruise. Well, even my first reaction was an overpowering urge to hunt down the casting director and smack him around for a few hours. In all fairness to Tom Cruise, I didn't feel any of the actors were well chosen at all. However, I was, as was Mrs. Rice, proved completely wrong. (Hold on to this, kids... It's the only time I'll ever admit it.) Everyone puts forth a compelling portrayal of their characters, even though Brad Pitt often delivers his lines with all the sincerity of a politician. So ignore all the hype you hear about this movie and run, do not walk, to the theatre. Right now. Why are you still reading this? Why aren't you at the theatre yet? But seriously, if you're looking for a movie with a great storyline, this really is the sort of movie that makes you exit the theatre as fast as you can, so you can get in line for the next showing. By the way: read the book.

What We'd Do with $1.5 Million "Infrastructure" Dollars

1. Plow another campus entrance through Lo-Ellen
2. Buy some books and subsidize tuition
3. Pave "the Pit"
4. Build another Pub
5. Build a school of Nursing and Midwifery
6. Build tunnels connecting the federated universities and the main campus (if they can build a "chunnel" they can damn well connect this god forsaken place!)
7. Build another residence (or two)
8. Buy some unbreakable signs (has anyone seen the R.D. Parker Building lately?)
9. Put up speed bump warning signs behind University College
10. Build a movie theatre and bring back $2.50 Tuesdays

Les extra-tereste le font aussi!

par Le pervers

Toujours à la recherche...

Tous les soirs, à la suite de mes exercices physiques je m'allonge sur le gazon et admire les étoiles. D'accord parfois je ne suis pas la seule personne allongée quelque part dans le parc des exités. Peu importe si je suis la seule personne ou non, je sais qu'est-ce qui se passe dans mon esprit. Bon peut-être c'est aussi une fantaisie! Oui, oui moi aussi j'ai des fantaisie pas dans le commun normal. Pas aussi terre-à-terre que les vôtres mais quand même...

Revenons à ces étoiles...des brillantes, des grandes, des petites, des plus rapprochées, des plus timides parfois même toute une colonie! Et je pense qu'elles doivent bien s'en permettre. Disons qu'elles n'ont pas l'air de s'ennuyer. Comment peuvent-elles avec tout ce monde qui les admire.

Mais quelque part dans le lointain, les extra-terestes qu'est-ce qu'ils font? Quoi? Vous pensez qu'ils n'existent pas? Retournez donc à vos livres de mathématique! Les extra-terestes que je m'imagine sont l'un plus unique que l'autre. Dans leur monde la gêne n'existe pas! Je m'imagine qu'ils font toutes leurs petites activités en l'air, pendant qu'ils volent autour du centre d'achat. Ces spécimens n'auraient même pas besoin de s'arrêter dans leur loisir car ils ne doivent pas s'arrêter pour manger ou dormir ou d'autre chose.

Comment devraient les extra-terestes être pour t'intriguer? Une femme verrait peut-être son extra-tereste comme un spécimen sensuel, charmeur, intelligent, amusant et riche. Si elle est un peu plus demandante elle voudrait une barre de fer constante (ou peut-être plus d'une), des grandes pattes curieuses et douce, une plage de toison pour y reposer sa tête, un arrière train bien développer pour s'y accrocher.

Si c'est un homme il désirerait un extra-tereste qui sait quand les mots sont de trop. L'homme verrait un spécimen avec des jambes qui ne finissent pas, peut-être avec des ailes cela faciliterait certaines positions (Plus besoin de table, d'oreillé ou même d'autre chose). Elle pourrait aussi avoir plus d'une paire...

Cela me rappelle une plaisanterie: Une femme et un homme sont dans un parc lorsque un ovni atterrit juste devant

eux. Les extra-terestes débarquent et s'en viennent droit sur les deux personnes. Le petit groupe d'extra-tereste est formé d'un homme et d'une femme. Les nouveaux arrivés expliquent aux terriens que chez eux c'est une coutume d'échanger les partenaires pour souhaiter la bienvenue.

Les terriens veulent être poli et acceptent l'offre. La femme s'en va avec l'extra-tereste. Ils s'en vont dans un coin privé. Lorsqu'ils se retrouvent dans leur vêtement de naissance l'extra-tereste explique à la femme qu'elle pourra contrôler leur plaisir en tirant sur ces oreilles; l'oreille droite pour la largeur et l'oreille gauche pour la longueur. (On n'a pas le droit de publier le reste de la soirée)

Lentement les visiteurs sont partis et le couple se retrouve dans le parc. L'homme demande à la femme: - Comment était ta soirée? La femme répond: - Une expérience très enrichissante... Je me suis très bien amusée, et toi? L'homme la regarde surpris et murmure: - C'était un cauchemar elle n'arrêtait pas de me tirer les oreilles.

A ce point vous êtes supposez rire... Enfin, chacun son sens d'humour. Je vous raconterais encore plus sur les extra-terestes mais un ovni vient d'atterrir. À la prochaine.

Se souvenir de la guerre et désirer la paix

- La guerre part du coeur de la personne qui ne s'aime pas elle-même, qui envie les autres, leurs talents, leurs richesses.
- La guerre commence quand je me prends pour le nombril du monde et que je manipule les personnes à mon service.
- La guerre grandit quand je m'approprie injustement le fruit du travail des autres et que je n'accepte pas de partager avec les plus faibles de la communauté humaine, les enfants, les personnes âgées et les malades.

- La paix naît de l'acceptation et du respect de la dignité de mes frères et soeurs humains avec leurs couleurs, leurs cultures, leurs langues et leurs religions.

- La paix se maintient dans des rapports de justice entre les personnes et les nations.
- La paix grandit dans la collaboration entre les personnes et entre les nation.
Tous ces hommes et femmes furent honorés par leurs contemporains. Tous et toutes ont été la gloire de leur temps. ECCI 44:7

CIAU Soccer Blow By Blow

Thursday: Sherbrooke

Laurentian 4
Sherbrooke 2

The Laurentian Men's Soccer team crushed Sherbrooke 4-2 in their first game of the CIAU Championships at the University of British Columbia, Thursday. Your valiant Vees fell behind by a goal early but evened it up before the end of the first half with a goal by the rookie sensation Ricky James. Sherbrooke took a 2-1 lead in the second half but Laurentian responded with typical Voyageur pride—with not just a tying goal by Dave McDonald, not just a go-ahead goal by Gary Tennant, but also with an insurance goal by George Sarakinis. Incredibly, this three-goal barrage took the fired-up Vees less than five minutes to accomplish. A fine performance by Rob Sabadin in setting up the crucial third and fourth goals rewarded him with game MVP honours. The Voyageurs were able to enjoy a day of rest after their divine labours before facing their next opponents, the Alberta Golden Bears.

Saturday: U of Alberta

Alberta 1

Saturday's game was a critical turning point for the Laurentian Voyageurs. As a result of Alberta's earlier 6-1 licking of the hapless Sherbrooke Vert et Or, this game against Alberta was an absolute must-win in order to gain a berth in the gold medal match. Unfortunately, despite another outstanding performance by CIAU Player of the Year Dave McDonald in scoring a goal on the Voyageurs' behalf, Laurentian's best efforts resulted in a 1-1 tie. Because of their favourable goal differential, the tie sent Alberta onwards to the gold medal match against the UBC Thunderbirds and relegated Laurentian to going for the bronze on Sunday against their fresh rivals, the McMaster Marauders.

Sunday: McMaster Marauders

McMaster 4

Although Saturday's tie with Alberta was disappointing for the Voyageurs, in that they had lost their gold medal opportunity, the chances of picking up a bronze medal in the 1994-95 soccer season seemed good. The Vees' opponents in the match were the McMaster Marauders, the team that they had previously beaten in an exhilarating 3-2 overtime win to take their first OUAA Championship since 1991-92. Mac came out looking for revenge and, much to our valiant Vees' chagrin, the Marauders got what they wanted. Four McMaster goals ended Laurentian's great season by shutting them just out of the medals with a fourth place finish.

While it's not the finish that Coach Zorbas or his charges were looking for, it is a finish that just as quickly has become the start of the 1995-96 season. While the loss of James McLaren, due to running out of his five years of playing eligibility, will be a definite blow to the team, the foundation for next year's team is in place with every other player eligible to return to the Laurentian fold. The members of Laurentian University and the Sudbury community have every reason to be proud of the Voyageurs' fine showing—in their division, in their province, and in the nation. Congratulations, boys, and thanks for a fine season.

Soccer Vees Honoured
By CIAU

Courtesy Sport Info

The Laurentian Men's Soccer team last weekend had two players honoured by the CIAU. Roberto Sabadin, a 2nd year defender, was named CIAU 1st Team All-Canadian. Rob had an outstanding year anchoring a young defence that helped take the Vees to the OUAA Title and the CIAU during the OUAA playoffs and setting up 2 of the goals versus Sherbrooke at the CIAU's. Dave McDonald, a 2nd year midfielder, was named CIAU 1st Team All-Canadian and the CIAU Outstanding Player of the Year. Dave receives the Joe Johnson Memorial Trophy following a spectacular year. As Captain of the Voyageurs Dave provided the team with leadership both on and off the field. A former professional in the Canadian National Soccer League, Dave scored 5 goals during the regular season and was named CIAU Athlete of the Week for the week of October 10th. Laurentian University wishes to congratulate both these fine athletes on their accomplishments.

Hockey Squad Edges
Brock in OT

by Steve Martinovich
Assistant Editor

The few that showed up last Saturday to see the visiting division rivals Brock Badgers take on the struggling Vees got their money's worth as the game ended up in overtime, with Laurentian coming out on top. Brock was the favourite coming into the game, with league leading scoring leader Ryan Savoia and top five goaltender Bob Harrison. The game was marked with good goaltending from Brock's Harrison and Laurentian's Sean Spencer.

Chippy play characterized the game with both sides often ignoring the puck and going after the man, which made for interesting hockey. The mits came off in the second period with Rod Pasma scuffling with Brock's Martin for hitting Darren Dougan from behind. The second also marked the third Brock goal which put them up 3-2. With about five minutes left in the third, the boys in blue and gold tied up the game.

Overtime saw some conservative hockey with neither team willing to take any chances. Lio Spagnuolo broke the wall with the game winning goal, giving Laurentian the much needed win. The game spotlighted the need for the Vees to work on the powerplay as they failed to convert many opportunities into goals, notably in the second period.

Goal scorers for Laurentian were Brian Stagg, David Gartshore, Maurizio Piamonte and Lio Spagnuolo with the game winner.

10 Sassy Salad Sandwiches

Everyone loves a tuna or egg salad sandwich. So, we came up with new twists on Canada's favorite sandwich fillings - from an egg salad tossed with strips of smoked salmon to a tuna salad with gutsy Caesar dressing.

DEVILED EGG SALAD

Mash yolks of 4 hard-boiled eggs with 2 tbsp. light mayonnaise, 1 tsp. Dijon, 2 sliced green onions and a pinch of freshly ground black pepper. Then, coarsely chop whites and stir in. Serve on whole grain or pumpernickel. Makes 1 cup.

NEW SALMON SALAD

Mix a 7-1/2 oz. can drained salmon with 1/2 cup light yogurt, 1/2 cup chopped cucumber and 1/4 tsp. dried dillweed. Spoon onto bagels. Makes 1-1/4 cup.

SHRIMP SALAD

Mix 1 cup. chopped cooked shrimp with 1/2 cup chopped celery, 2 tbsp. light mayonnaise and 1 tbsp. chili sauce. Serve in whole grain buns. Makes 1-1/3 cup.

TUNA CAESAR SALAD

Stir a 7 oz. can drained tuna with 3 tbsp. light creamy Caesar dressing, 1/4 cup chopped celery and 2 sliced green onions. Add 1 seeded and chopped tomato, if you wish. Mound in hot dog buns or pitas. Makes 1-1/2 cup.

VEGETABLE SALAD

Stir 1/4 cup spreadable or softened cream cheese with 1 seeded and chopped tomato, 1/4 cup finely chopped mushrooms, 1 thinly sliced green onion, a dash of Worcestershire sauce and a pinch of freshly ground black pepper. Serve on whole grain bread. Makes 1 cup.

SMOKED SALMON EGG SALAD

Combine 4 coarsely chopped hard-boiled eggs and 2 to 4 tbsp. chopped smoked salmon with 1/4 cup light sour cream, 1 tbsp. chopped capers, 1 tbsp. chopped chives or 1 thinly sliced green onion, and freshly ground black pepper. Serve on thinly sliced baguettes or croissants. Makes 1-3/4 cups.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD

Stir 1/2 cup chopped cooked chicken with 1/4 cup each of coarsely chopped red pepper, chopped celery and light sour cream, and 1/4 tsp. curry powder. Spoon into pitas, or roll in tortillas or lettuce leaves. Makes 1 cup.

GREEK SALAD

Seed and chop 2 tomatoes. Combine with 1/4 cup crumbled feta cheese, 1 tbsp. each of yogurt and light mayonnaise, 1 tbsp. coarsely chopped fresh basil or 1/4 tsp. dried leaf basil, a pinch of dried leaf oregano and 1 small crushed garlic clove. Spoon into whole wheat pitas. Makes 1 cup.

FAJITA SALAD

Combine 1/2 cup chopped roast beef or leftover barbecued steak with 1/2 cup coarsely chopped green pepper, 1/4 cup seeded and chopped tomato, 1 thinly sliced green onion, 2 tbsp. light sour cream and 1 tbsp. salsa sauce. Taste and add pinches of chili powder and cayenne, if you wish. Roll in warm tortillas. Makes 3/4 cup.

HAM SALAD

Stir 1/2 cup chopped ham with 1/4 cup finely chopped dill pickle and 1/2 cup light mayonnaise. Use as a thick filling in bagels or pumpernickel. Makes 2/3 cup.

DO-IT-YOURSELF SANDWICH DINNER

- Make 3 or 4 fillings and pile them in bowls
- Buy a few deli salads
- Heap a basket with bagels, pitas, kaisers and tortillas
- Add small dishes of olives, pickles, mustards and spreads
- Fill stemmed glasses with carrot and celery sticks and use a creamy bottled dressing for dip

LU Athletes of the Week

The Sport Info Athletes of the Week are Lio Spagnuola and Dianne Norman. Lio, a 5th year veteran of the Laurentian Voyageurs Hockey team, scored once against Brock in overtime to lead the Vees to a 4-3 victory and also scored the game winner against York. Dianne, a 5th year veteran of the Lady Vees Basketball team, scored 46 points in Laurentian's two wins at the Concordia Basketball Tournament.

Volleyball Vees in Medal Finals

After an upsetting last place finish at the CIAU Preview Tournament last weekend, the Laurentian Volleyball Vees headed to London yesterday to participate in the Western Invitational Tournament. Action for the Vees began Saturday as they played the host team. In a tight match, Western pulled ahead and won 3-2 (13-15, 15-8, 15-4, 4-15, 15-10). The Vees were, however, triumphant in their second match as they crushed Brock University 3-0 (15-8, 15-12, 15-7). The MVP for both matches was Laurentian's captain Paul Rainville. Rainville had 19 kills and 1 block in the first match, and 13 kills and a block in the second match.

Volleyball Voyageurs Win Silver

The Laurentian Men's Volleyball team finished a successful showing at the Western Invitational Tournament by taking home the silver medal. Early on Saturday the Vees faced the Ryerson Rams and easily dismissed them 3-0 (15-6, 15-13, 15-7). Leading the way was game MVP Pete Gombocz with 8 kills, 1 block, and 1 ace. This win put Laurentian in the gold medal match versus host Western Mustangs. In a hard fought game the Mustangs prevailed 3-1 (15-4, 15-11, 11-15, 15-1). Game MVP was Phil Rehberg with an impressive 44 assist, 3 kills, and 3 block performance. The Vees' success at the tournament is evident as 2 players were named to the tournament All-Star team—congratulations captain Paul Rainville and middle Grant Patterson. The Voyageurs' next action is on Friday and Saturday as Laurentian host Queen's and Ryerson.

Hockey Vees Unbeatable at Home

The Laurentian Men's Hockey team won again on home ice Sunday against the University of York. The final score was 6-3. The score was tied at 3 a piece until late in the third period when Lio Spagnuola dumped one in to give the Vees the lead. This was followed by another quick goal by Pat Armatage and one more by Darren Dougan. Top scorer for the Vees was Darren Dougan with 2 goals and 1 assist. The Voyageurs take to the road for the first of their next four away games as they face off against Waterloo on Friday, November 18.

Lady Vees—Coffee, Please?

by Dan Scott

Sports Editor

Brew up one big pot of black coffee and serve it to the Lady Vees Basketball team. That's what everyone's hoping the Windsor Lancers did Friday night in handing Laurentian a 50-40 wake-up call—although this loss may be closer to a three-bell alarm. In a game that Coach Ennis called "an absolute horror show," his Laurentian squad started by posting a total 13 points in the first half. The ridiculously low score was not a result of any great defense by the Lancers, just the product of what was perhaps the worst team shooting percentage in Lady Vees history.

It was, as Ennis put it, "simply a classic case of anticipating the big game to come against Winnipeg" and forgetting that there were two games to win before that match-up could occur. Everyone on the team was anxious to meet up with the Wesmen in a bid to stop their winning streak at what would have been their 88th game, one game short of the North American college / university streak record. The only player that showed up for the Windsor game was the ever-reliable Dianne Norman, who contributed 16 points on the night.

Having been told flat-out by their coach that "this is not what playing basketball at Laurentian is about," the Vees were challenged to shape up for Saturday's game against Queen's Golden Gaels. Ennis said the Vees "responded to my challenge with lots of intensity" and Laurentian dominated the entire game, taking Queen's to a 80-50 loss. Leading by standing team effort.

Sunday afternoon's game was a lopsided match that saw a refocused Lady Vees team pound the Brock Badgers by a final score of 74-42.

The Vees once again led by 17 at the half and continued their offensive and defensive dominance in a concerted effort. Dianne once again led the scoring with 23 points and 12 rebounds, while Katie Malone and Shelly Dewar each added 14 points to their cause.

Despite the ugly upset that began the Concordia Tournament and the resulting missed opportunity for a rematch with the Winnipeg Wesmen, our Ladies showed that their weekend may have been a much needed wake-up call by posting back-to-back consistent games. That consistency, so important to a team which desires to make itself a serious contender, simply has not been evident thus far in the exhibition season.

The Queen's and Brock games are definitely positive signs, and there is great potential in the Vees' pool of talent, their pride, their veteran leadership, and the proven coaching methodology of Peter Ennis. This weekend the Lady Vees Basketball team will change pace dramatically with a trip to Oakland College in Michigan for an Americanized version of women's basketball.

The ever-reliable Dianne Norman

17 points at the half, the Lady Vees kept the pressure on defensively and continued to build their lead to a convincing margin of 30 points. A team destined to crack this year's top ten, the Golden Gaels are a far superior team to the Lancers, and the old-style Laurentian win certainly restored some credibility to the Lady Vees. Joy McNichol returned to the fold with a 30 point contribution, while Dianne added 23, and Shelly Dewar netted 15 points in the out-

Swimming With The Tide

by Kelly Chester
Staff Writer

Last weekend the Laurentian Aqua Vees traveled to Carleton and Sherbrooke. This was not the easiest weekend for the Vees and to many swimmers this roadtrip was the path to hell. After two weeks of strenuous and tiring practices the athletes had to use up every last bit of energy they had during the competitions. On Friday night they were able to rise above their fatigue. Both the men's and women's teams won in a three way meet against Carleton and Queen's. The MVP for the men's team was none other than Dave Chisholm. Dave placed first in the 400m Freestyle and 200m Backstroke. He was also on the winning 4x100m Medley relays. Pam Hutchinson was given MVP for the women's team for finishing first in the 200m Backstroke and she was also a part of the winning 4x100m Freestyle and Medley relays.

The Ottawa meet was merely a quick dip for the Aqua Vees as they continued that night for another five hour tour to Sherbrooke. Traveling eleven hours on Friday really took a toll on our swimmers. On Saturday the Vees took on thirteen other schools. The women's team had a hard time in the pool and placed tenth. The men's team had a much better meet and they placed fifth. Once again the MVP was Dave (the Machine) Chisholm. Dave won the 400m Freestyle, 400m Individual Medley, and the 200m Butterfly. Congratulations is necessary for all the Aqua Vees who traveled last weekend. Competing on little or no sleep is a hard task and you definitely deserve a pat on the back.

This Friday the Aqua Vees travel to Toronto for the OUAA / OWIAA Invitational. Hopefully those past two months of hard training will pay off for the swimmers. On Saturday the Vees will be back at Laurentian to take on Carleton at 12:30 p.m. So come out and cheer them on. This may be the only opportunity to see the Lady Vees without all that hair!

Put on your Long Johns and bundle up in your Parkas because snow football is once again coming to Laurentian. Snow football is a fun game of flag football simply played outside in the tundra conditions, instead of inside the cozy gym. This fine sporting event is taking place on January 14-15 for the men, and February 11-12 for the women on the field outside the Ben Avery athletic facility. Registration times are quickly approaching, teams must be entered between November 21-30 with a $20 registration fee per team. However there is limited registration, so don't wait long to get over to the Intramural office and get involved in this fun-filled weekend. If you have any questions or what more details call anytime at 673-9509.

OUAA Update

OUAA Athlete of the Week

Lio Spagnuolo, forward with the Laurentian Vees hockey team, is the OUAA Athlete of the Week. The fourth year economics student from Kettleby scored the winning goals in both Laurentian's 4-3 overtime win over Brock and the 6-3 win over York as the Voyageurs moved within four points of first place in the Mid West Division.

Soccer

McMaster and Laurentian placed third and fourth respectively at the CIAU Soccer Championships in Vancouver last weekend. Both teams finished second in pool play and the Marauders the Voyageurs 4-0 in the bronze medal game. UBC Thunderbirds won the title with a 5-0 win over Alberta.

Laurentian midfielder, Dave McDonald, was recipient of the Joe Johnson Memorial Trophy as the CIAU outstanding Player of the Year as well as First Team All Canadian. McDonald was accompanied by teammate full-back, Rob Sabadin, Bruno Piccinin of McMaster and Toronto forward, Tom Kouzmanis. Second Team All Canadians included fullbacks Steve Albanese of Toronto and Western's Paul Hillman along with Laurier midfielder, Steve Antolicic.

Cross-Country

Windsor and Western placed 2-3 respectively at the CIAU Championships at Thames Valley Golf Course in London, Saturday. The Lancers, whose runners Peter Fonseca and Jason Boyle finished second and third respectively were just two points behind champion Victoria Vikings. Victoria was a well-balanced team as they took the title despite lacking an individual finish in the top five.

Veas	90
Windsor	82
Veas	85
Concordia	86

This past weekend, Laurentian hosted a men's basketball tournament which featured Toronto, Concordia, and Windsor, along with the Veas. On Friday night, L.U. defeated Windsor 90-82, but it was a pretty close game, as the Veas didn't quite play up to their potential. Coach Peter Campbell stated that "we didn't play smart basketball. We were trying to make difficult plays, and Windsor played tough physical defense which caused us problems. The last two and a half minutes, the Veas played very good defense, rebounded hard, and made huge shots. When we had a chance to lose the game, we stepped up and played hard." Swords, Hann, and Bailey's performances shone Friday night, Coach Campbell proclaimed. Brad Hann was the top scorer with 25 points, while Cory Bailey was the game MVP.

The win against Windsor placed Laurentian in the final game against Concordia—a team ranked in the top ten of the country, according to Coach Peter Campbell. Unfortunately, the Veas lost by a single point—the final score was 86-85. There were some incredible feats accomplished by the Veas: Brad Hann scored 16 of L.U.'s first 22 points in the first four minutes of the game, while Cory Bailey was the top scorer for the game with a phenomenal 30 points! Coach Campbell was pleased with the Veas performance, although obviously disappointed by the close loss.

"We are playing really hard, really well. Bailey was an all-star—he played great, and we had a terrific performance from Brad Hann. Without Swords, we might not have been playing in the final game. The inside guys did well with mismatches. Adam Dusome played super also, he appears to be improving and is coming along well."

As far as improvement is concerned, Campbell believes one of the main things to work on is making better choices. He claims the team needs to be focused throughout the entire game, for when the Veas relax is when they leave themselves open and vulnerable.

It really was an awesome game, and the crowd got right into it, cheering on the Veas, although I have to admit "Damn!" was a common thought amongst the spectators because it was so close! This weekend, the Veas head out West once more to take on Manitoba and Winnipeg. We wish them luck!

ELS AT LARGE!

Wanted: Students who either 1) write fiction, short stories, essays, or 2) like to listen to writing by other students or 3) LOVE either 1 or 2.

People who think this is boring haven't given it a fair shake. People who have thought about getting involved but have put it off aren't being fair to themselves. We know there are some HOT writers out there hiding. We know that you would LOVE our WRITER'S CIRCLE. It's a casual place to share writing without the pressure of a classroom environment. Usually taking place every Thursday evening at 8ish in the TV Lounge, and the odd Sunday evening at 258 Pine St. Apt. 100. BUT, if you can't make these times AND want to come- we will chivalrously change the time to suit everyone's schedule- YOU OWE this experience to yourself as a writer or enthusiast In the immortal words of our former president, Yana Bauer, before entering the nerve-stripping reality of teacher's college, "Join the ELS Writer's Circle or risk entering the eternal void of misguided writers everywhere on Venus!" Well, the same holds true down here on Earth. And if Yana ever gets back she'll probably concur.

WAIT! In addition to our Writer's Circle, the ELS hosts Poetry Nights throughout the year- normally in the TV Lounge - with complimentary quaffers and stomach stuffers!

Our next big event will take place Dec. 2 in room SCE209. The Christmas Pot Luck Dinner asways has something to please even the pickiest party-goer. Each person brings a dish of their favorite holiday food or throws in money to chow. Trust us, this is ONE Buffet you will not want to forget about. Mark it on your calendar and GO! Want more info, call Steve - VP Writer's Circle, 674-3521, or Tony - ELS Secretary, 674-0245. Oh, and if you hate writing, Come anyway!!

Well, the time has come to actually see members of the University Régie roll up their sleeves and literally get their hands dirty as they pick up those filthy dishes and wash those sticky tables during the United Way's "Lunch Hour Clean-Up!" Come and see your senior administrators (Ross Paul, Ron Chrysler, Nicole Boivin, Paul Cappon, Hermann Falter, Marian Croft, Gratien Allaire) actually perform this feat on November 21, from 12 noon to 1 p.m., in the Great Hall. Funds raised will be donated to the United Way/Centraide. Since these administrators will be 'properly attired' for the occasion, we plan to formally introduce them to you and members of the media who will join us. We hope to see you all there on the 21st and don't forget to bring your change.
